I tried it and it worked Just a little simple vid My touchpad is a synaptics and in the control panels mouse settings has an automatic disable option there when a mouse is plugged in.. I have been trying for a while to get the same thing running on my XPS, as the touchpad is so big and the keyboard so small, it is almost always an annoyance when you accidentally touch it.. Something like that But it continued to rise up ever so slowly, to the point I could no longer actually click the trackpad no matter how hard I pushed.. Well, today I found a quick solution, albeit a manual one I have tried GPointing Device Settings, Touchpad Indicator and more, with no success.. Hit read more if you want the commands Simply put, you first need to find the device name.. I will release the update when I confirm my SSDT hotpath works and is compatible with more XPS machines.. Fn+F3 turns on the orange light of the touchpad, but doesn't disable The erratic cursor is better, sometimes it moves but I don't know if it is caused by my hand when is very close to the touchpad (maybe it becomes more sensitive).. The configuration tool in Ubuntu only lets me do some tweaks to speeds etc, but not disable the device.. You find that by running this command: Recently it has annoyed me so much that I went the terminal route and wanted to disable it manually with X11.. One of my most loved features of some Touchpad drivers are "Disable when another pointing device is connected". ae05505a44 Best Typing App For Mac
